Liechtensteinklamm

In the heart of the Salzburger country you can make self a picture of the Liechtenstein-clammy, there are you not only one for the most beautiful, but also one of the deepest and longest ravines of the alpine regions.

Up to 3000 m (9000 feet) high were the glaciers of the last ice age and they covered mountains and valleys. As the climate changed, the ancient force of the glaciers moulded huge cliffs and ridges into the main and side valleys. The tremendous current from the waters of the Großarl river were fighting against the rocks for thousands of years and cut a 300 m (900feet) high Canyon into the ground - The Liechtensteinklamm.
